Cyrus Hall McCormick Jerome Increase Case Gold Medal Award

The Cyrus Hall McCormick Jerome Increase Case Gold Medal Award is awarded “For Exceptional and Meritorious Engineering Achievement in Agriculture”. Presented annually from 1932 through 1985 as the Cyrus Hall McCormick Medal, portraits of Cyrus Hall McCormick, inventor of the self-rake reaper, and Jerome Increase Case, developer of the “reliable” threshing machine, are emblazoned on the medal’s gold face. In the forefront, depictions of the harvesters appear below the determined countenances of the builders.

On the medal’s reverse side, a contemporary combine, tractor, and farmstead are set against a radiating sun to symbolize the new era in American agriculture. Other key elements of the image include food and fiber products, an ASABE emblem and the Case IH logo which represents, as do the background elements, the inventive and entrepreneurial genius of the two men in whose honor this medal is named.
